INTRODUCTION.

THE Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts is the oldest institution devoted to art in the United States. It was founded in 1805, and chartered the next year, but actually dates from 1791, when Charles Willson Peale attempted to organize in Philadelphia a School for the Fine Arts. This purpose, though supported by Ceracchi the Italian sculptor then in America, William Rush, and other artists, was not successful; but out of it grew, in 1794, the Columbianum, and in the same year the first public exhibition of paintings in Philadelphia was held by that association in Independence Hall. The Columbianum existed in a tentative way for several years, and Peale's interest in a school, society, or academy to advance the interests of the fine arts never abated. Hence, when some public-minded citizens of Philadelphia, chiefly lawyers, determined that the time for making a pronounced effort toward this end had arrived, it was to Mr. Peale that they turned, and the formative meeting was held in his rooms in the old State House. This occurred in 1805, and on March 28, 1806, the Academy was incorporated. Its first President was George Clymer, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, who held the position for eight years. His successors have been: Judge Joseph Hopkinson, the accomplished author of Hail Columbia, who held the office from 1813 to 1842; Joseph Dugan, from 1842 to 1845; Edward L. Carey, 1845; Joseph R. Ingersoll, from 1846 to 1852; Henry D. Gilpin, from 1852 to 1859; Caleb Cope, from 1859 to 1871; James L. Claghorn, from 1872 to 1884; George S. Pepper, from 1884 to 1890; and Edward H. Coates, elected in 1890. Portraits of all the earlier Presidents except Messrs. Hopkinson, Dugan, and

INTRODUCTION.

Ingersoll now hang in the Directors' room, and it is much desired that the omissions may ultimately be filled.

The works of art belonging to the Academy, which are catalogued in the following pages, have slowly accumulated during the eighty-nine years of its existence, except in the cases of the Carey and Temple collections. The Carey collection was formed by the fourth President of the Academy, who was one of the earliest patrons of the fine arts in the country. Mr. Carey's sister married Charles Robert Leslie, R.A., who was born in England while his parents were temporarily sojourning there, and who subsequently adopted England as his home. It was through his aid that the examples of the British school of painters now owned by the Academy were obtained. Mr. Carey was also a judicious patron of American artists, as is indicated by the pictures of the American school in the Carey collection. These works were purchased from the late Mr. Henry C. Carey, to whom they had been bequeathed by his brother.

The Temple collection is the result of a foundation established by Mr. Joseph E. Temple in 1880, and now numbers thirty-four pictures, to which will be added from time to time other representative paintings by American artists, from the annual exhibitions of the Academy. These, with the pictures and sculpture brought together from many other sources, render the galleries of the Academy equal in importance and in artistic value to any in the country.

The plan adopted for the catalogue is a very simple one. The pictures are divided into three classes—American, British, and Continental. The last class is subdivided into artists before, and artists of, the nineteenth century. Each division is arranged alphabetically according to the artists, and the pictures are numbered consecutively. The same classification has been followed with the sculpture. Thus, American, A 1 to A 199; British, B 200 to B 299; Continental before the nineteenth century, C 300 to C 399; Continental of the nineteenth century, D 400 to D 499. The number of the picture is in the centre of the page. The corresponding number on the right-hand side of the page is the number of the wall upon which the picture hangs.

INTRODUCTION.

In addition to the works here catalogued, the Academy possesses a fine collection of casts in the school department; some interesting original drawings; the Phillips collection of 40,000 etchings and engravings in the Print Room; a complete set of the Arundel Society publications; and the following small but valuable collection of miniatures and medallions hung in the Directors' room:

ALBUM.

THE PENNSYLVANIA ACADEMY OF THE FINE ARTS

ALBUM

REPRODUCTIONS OF SELECTED WORKS IN THE PERMANENT COLLECTION OF THE ACADEMY.

THIRTY PLATES.

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR.

The Academy has recently issued the above work, containing thirty full-page Levytype plates. Each plate is accompanied by a page of text, biographical, descriptive, and critical. The size of the page, 11 x 14, gives ample scope for a satisfactory reproduction, and this, with the quality of the paper and character of the press-work, renders the volume worthy of preservation as a record of the Academy and as a work of rare beauty. The examples reproduced are by :
